Paris, June 26—Karl L. Radek says Russia will be the freest people in the world with a new constitution. Writing in the Russian newspaper, Pravda, Radek says:
"The rights of Soviet workers will be assured by placing at the disposal of workers and their organizations printing presses, supplies of paper, public buildings, streets and means of communication."
"Nowhere, under capitalism, could workers' rights be realized so completely. Even in those bourgeois countries where it seems there is considerable freedom of the press, the proletarian enjoys this freedom only to the extent of his means to purchase printing paper and to pay the expenses of printing."
Paper and ink do not amount to much when somebody else decides what you may write and print.
The American prefers to buy his own paper, and write on it what he pleases, also he would prefer a system that would enable every man to buy his paper instead of getting it for nothing.
A learned professor warns men that they are going to become less and less important and women more important. Men had to be big and strong, when they fought lions, wolves and then each other, dug ditches and carried heavy loads. More and more, as they work with push-button machinery, in war and in peace, their muscles will become smaller. Woman, producing the race, will retain her size. Before long, from one hundred to five hundred thousand years hence, wives may be carrying their husbands around in one corner of the arm as they now carry marionettes or lap dogs.
In the lower animal kingdom it goes even farther. You know that when a certain species of huge ocean crab is caught, it is always a female. Under one of the female's flippers is always the husband, about as big as a ten-cent piece, but plenty big enough.
Haile Selassie discovers that water and emperors that have gone over the dam do not count. He went to England expressing full confidence that the British would "do him justice," meaning that they would put him back on his throne. He saw Duke of Gloucester, King Edward's brother, for half an hour. Just a "social call," the duke, shaking the former emperor for his hospitality at Addis Ababa, when the duke dropped in there. No interview with the British King and Emperor. In world politics, England is practical.
England protested against raising the elevation of guns on American warships, because that would make our guns shoot too far. In case of war we might hit a British ship lined up against us.
Our statesmen, who will "answer to hi, or to any old cry" when it comes from England, say "Yes sir, yes sir, yes sir." And our guns won't be elevated. How CAN they be, if England objects?
But England made the same protest to Japan. Let us see what Japan will answer. This you may write down, no matter what Japan answers, she will increase her gun elevation, if she thinks that will increase her fighting power.
In Rome, as in other places on the earth's surface, one city is piled upon another. Dig down through one and the other appears. Invasions, plagues, famines and the grinding ice ages have wiped them out.
Those that rule this today are the descendants of men such as the inhabitants of that Stone Age village. And still we are worried, looking down at the enemy, poverty, that may climb up and attack us.
There is no wisdom compared to nature's wisdom, no cruelty compared to nature's cruelty. Nature allows one young fish to live, she kills four thousand, and her race died in the sea, and hatreds would seem more intense than the hatreds and cruelties of the most vicious and prejudiced human being.
For instance, in one big American city, statisticians show "three times as many Negroes as whites, in proportion to population, die from tuberculosis every year."
And nature's cruelty and her statistics cannot be reached through legislation.
You don't wonder that crime is a safe industry in the United States, when the lawyer of a criminal can say to one of the prosecutors, "I'll tell you my client, and I will put you on the Supreme Court bench or forfeit a quarter of a million cash, if I fail."

Shortage in Everett Tax Cash Traced

DRUNK CAR DRIVER, $2282 DISAPPEARS

"Let me welcome you to the convention" must have been part of the conversation at the time the Boston Evening American camera clicked on this scene in the convention hall at Philadelphia. James Roosevelt, son of the President and a Massachusetts delegate, is shown as he met Governor James M. Curley in the Massachusetts section of the hall. Young Roosevelt had previously greeted the governor on his arrival in town.

PAWTTUCKET POLICE FIND $13,500

Pawtucket, R. I., June 26—An armored bank truck containing $15,782 vanished from in front of a bank here today, its driver with it.
At the pitch of a hunt for hijacking bandits, however, the truck was found, a mile from the scene. All the money was intact except $2282, but the driver still missing.
The mysterious disappearance took place from in front of the Rhode Island Hospital Trust Company branch.
The abandoned armored car was found in Bowers street, and police said witnesses reported seeing the driver, Walter W. Hussey leaving it.
On the seat of the machine they found Hussey's pistol and his shirt. In the rear $13,500 lay in bags. The truck is owned by the International Detective Company and Hussey was employed by the service.

Everett Tax Shortage Is Laid to 13

Alleged cash discrepancies totaling $4,906.66 "due from a former collector, a former cashier and 11 former constables" of the city of Everett, were reported today by Theodore N. Waddell, state director of accounts.
The report also states that the city's books show $3,214.70 in overdrawn and unprovided for appropriations and overpay accounts, and $88,000 in unpaid bills.
COVERS 6 MONTHS
The report is based on an audit covering the period from Jan. 27, 1935, to January 15, 1936, made by Herman B. Dier, assistant director of accounts.
According to the report those connected with the discrepancies are former City Collector George L. Woods, former cashier, Harold J. Gibson, and the late James Bruce, constable.
John P. O'Keefe, William Smith, Edward Gregory, Daniel J. Smith, Theophile Morris, Archie DeDominick, Thomas J. Dever, Clarence T. Cassidy, Emanuel Casper, Margaret Bruce and the late James Bruce, constable.
RESTITUTION CITED
During the audit, according to Director Waddell, restitution of $3,482 was made to the city by one of the persons said to be connected with the alleged discrepancies.
Director Waddell stated that in most cases where constables were sent out to collect overdue taxes, they did not supply them with warrants but simply gave them lists of unpaid accounts. Nevertheless, the constables charged the taxpayers the warrant fee of 50 cents, retaining this for their own use, according to Waddell.

DEMOCRATS ROAR O. K. TO ROOSEVELT

THE SENATOR

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service Staff Correspondent
Convention Hall, Philadelphia, June 26 — Controversies behind them, arguments ended, the Democrats in their national convention today got down to the real business—the re-nomination of President Roosevelt. They rallied enthusiastically to the job.
Judge John E. Mack, neighbor and life-long friend of Mr. Roosevelt's again placed him in nomination.
He nominated him four years ago at Chicago, and amid far different surroundings, in an entirely different environment, he again gave the convention the name of his old friend.
"I give you as your candidate," he said, "no longer a citizen of merely one state, but a son of all the 48 states, Franklin D. Roosevelt."
A spontaneous roar came from the delegates.

PRIEST LINKS ROOSEVELT TO 'REDS'

Detroit, June 26 (INS) — Accusing President Roosevelt of building a "Communist's nest," the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, radio priest, today joined Representative William Lemke of North Dakota in a front porch interview at the clergyman's home in predicting the election of Lemke to the presidency in the November elections on the third party ticket.
Where most political observers believed Lemke's Union party would not become a major factor until at least the 1940 elections, both the priest and the congressman serenely forecast victory early as November, and indicated that the priest's economic theories would be the ABC of the Lemke administration.
Thomas C. O'Brien of Boston, vice-presidential candidate, conferred with Lemke and Father Coughlin on the third party aims.
"The indications are we will win in Michigan, Ohio, all of New England, all of the Middle West, Pennsylvania, the extreme West, Illinois and Oklahoma," said the North Dakota congressman. "We will get an equal break in all of them."

MURDER BY MOTOR?

Hit-Run Driver, Victim Vanish

The worst hit-and-run case in Boston police annals was revealed today as search was launched for the missing victim of an auto accident in Sullivan square, Charlestown.
The victim, a man, was picked up and carried away by the driver of the auto that struck him.
The police have been unable to find him in any hospital and their belief is that he is suffering some where, without medical attention, unless he is dead and his body hidden.
All police departments in this section of the state were called upon to aid in the search for the accident victim.
Police said the victim, a pedestrian, was evidently seriously injured because he was flung 25 feet when the machine struck him. The accident occurred at 1:15 a. m. yesterday morning in Sullivan square.
Two witnesses told police they saw the driver stop, get out, pick up the injured man and flee him.

Stores Prepared For Rush

Tomorrow is the last shopping Saturday until September in the big Boston department stores.
Managers and sales forces were preparing today, with fresh stocks of attractive merchandise, for the largest pre-vacation buying in several years. A record summer has been pre-announced by travel and resort bookings.
Attractions for summer fun, household articles for summer homes, vacation luggage, playthings for children, equipment for golfing, camping, bicycling, swimming, boating and fishing, will draw shopping thousands by rail, bus, subway and private motor.
Arrangements have been made by police for smooth and efficient handling of the throng in the shopping district. Tomorrow is the last chance at shopping for these vacationers and the last Saturday chance, until fall, for everybody.

CURLEY SPIKES HIS BOOM, FAVORS GARNER AGAIN

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent
Philadelphia, June 26—Governor Curley vice-president John N. Garner for re-nomination as Vice-President.

Hailed like a conquering hero on his arrival in this convention city, the Governor turned thumbs down on the "Curley for Vice-President" boom which has been running through the various states since last Monday.

Despite the governor's declaration for Garner, Dr. Jay Schaffer, chairman of the Utah delegation, was reported today as insisting that he would place Curley's name in nomination and that it would be seconded. If this should happen, those close to the governor declared, the Massachusetts chief executive will immediately withdraw his name.

"As a delegate from Porto Rico to the Chicago convention, I nominated Garner and have had no reason to change the fulsome praise that I showered upon him at that time. I learned that he is a candidate for the Vice-Presidency and I did everything I can to promote the candidacy of John Garner."

THIRD PARTY AID
The governor was of the opinion that the Democratic party in Massachusetts will get the breaks from the third party movement.

"About 95 per cent of the townsmen are recruited from the Republican party, while not more than 10 per cent of the followers of Father Coughlin are within the Democratic party," he explained. "I think it will be to the advantage of the Democratic party."

Senator Marcus A. Coolidge, who originally favored abrogation of the two-thirds rule, but who voted in committee against it, was left out on a limb by the Curley announcement for abrogation and the subsequent action of the convention. After Governor Curley had differed with the views of Senator Walsh on scrapping the 19-year-old rule, a number of delegates in the Massachusetts contingent claimed that no caucus of the delegates had ever been taken.

It had previously been given out by Chairman Joseph McGrath of the state committee that the delegation stood 27 to 7 against abrogation.

Another wild demonstration for Governor Curley took place in the Roosevelt's Health O.K.

Washington, June 26 (INS)—President Roosevelt swings into his re-election campaign "in better physical trim" than when he first entered the White House three and a quarter years ago.

Capt. Ross T. McIntire, White House physician, who checks up on the President's health at least three times a week, said today:

"The President's blood pressure is well inside normal. His heart is sound and his circulatory system good. All in all, he is in sounder health than he was three years ago."

conveyed by open automobile to the Broad street station of the Pennsylvania railroad in the heart of the city where he was given a reception by 300 Massachusetts delegates, visitors and other well-wishers from various states.

Under the escort of four policemen, Governor Curley was finally conducted to the big platform and given a seat there. Senators Walsh and Coolidge were not present at the floor during the demonstration. A special body guard for the governor was assigned him on orders of Mayor Wilcox of Philadelphia.

The governor was of the opinion that the present strained relations within the party over the disaffection of Lieutenant-Governor Joseph L. Hurley would straighten out.

JIBES AT SALTONSTALL

The governor declined to comment when he was asked if he would support the entire pre-arranged slate of tickets. He jibed at Speaker Leverett Saltonstall for adjourning the House over the week-end.

"The rich boy decided there would be no baseball game and walked away with the hat and ball, so we can't play until Monday."

When asked if he intended to gain the floor to answer the Smith-Ely group appeal to the delegates to nominate a "genuine Democrat," other than Roosevelt, the governor remarked:

"I listened over the radio to the speech of Senator Barkley and I feel that he has answered every criticism that might be leveled at President Roosevelt and his administration. He answered all the Smith-Ely arguments in full and I feel that anything I could say would be in the nature of attempting to gild the lily."

H. N. Guterman's Father Is Dead

Max Guterman, father of U. S. Commissioner Harry N. Guterman, died suddenly this morning at his home, 48 Elm Hill avenue, Dorchester. Funeral services were held this afternoon.

Besides the commissioner, he left another son, Abraham G. Guterman, and a daughter, Mrs. Anna Clayman, both of Boston.

LEHMAN TO GET RECEPTION

Philadelphia, June 26 (INS)—A mammoth demonstration, designed to persuade Governor Herbert H. Lehman of New York that he should run again, will be staged today when Lehman seconds the nomination of President Roosevelt at the Democratic national convention.

The demonstration, for which arrangements have been quietly made, will climax the steady pressure which has been applied to the New York governor by state and national leaders since he arrived here today.

Dr. John Cummings Dies in Capital

Washington, June 26 (AP)—Dr. John Cummings, 68, chief of research and statistics of the United States Office of Education, died here today.

A native of Colerbrook, N. H., he was a professor of political economy at Harvard and the University of Chicago before entering government service in 1919.

Seconding Speech By Negro Barred

Philadelphia, June 26 (INS)—At the last minute, the Democratic Party today had snatched from Arthur W. Mitchell, congressman from Chicago, the privilege of being the first Negro to second the nomination of a Democrat for President.

Everything was all set for Mitchell to arise after the nomination of Franklin D. Roosevelt and deliver a seconding address, in behalf of the Illinois delegation.

But, after these plans were made, U. S. Senator Ellison D. Smith, of South Carolina, vowed he would bolt the convention if Mitchell were allowed to second the President's nomination. There were numerous other growls from Southerners, though less public.

So, it was decided it has not been revealed by whom—that Governor Henry Horner, of Illinois, and not Mitchell, would deliver the seconding speech.

To solve the feelings of Mitchell, the powers which forbade his seconding address allowed him to speak before the convention last night.

FRENCH NAVAL WORKERS GO ON STRIKE

Paris, June 25 (AP)—Naval shipyard workers declared a general strike at St. Nazaire today, halting red flag.

They stopped all work on new units for the French navy and occupied the yards.

The strike movement involved 10,000 employees and five yards—the Loire, the De Perthes and the Loire St. Denis dockyards, the St. Nazaire foundries and the West.

The strikers demand immediate pay increases and a shorter week.

Paris Fears Strike Of Police in Crisis

Paris, June 25 (NS)—Scenes of wild excitement were enacted in the Chamber of Deputies today when Parliament debated the shipping strike at Marseilles while fear of a police riot hung over Paris.

Right and left deputies shouted one another down as conservatives bitterly attacked the rise of Red France following installation of Leon Blum's Socialist government, while Communists blasted the government's industrial disorders on "gangster influence."

The danger of a police strike, with consequent unbridled political rioting, loomed as police of the Seine et Oise department complained against the government's "slowness" in reforming police statutes.

BLOODSHED IN ALGERIA

Meantime seven Arab marine strikers were shot and wounded in the French Colonial city of Algiers, North Africa. Six gradations were injured in rioting that caused them to open fire on the Arabs.

Radio waves flashing a "red" message far out into the Mediterranean, today stirred a French ship crew to mutiny and fired the vessel toward Marseilles harbor to bring the total of idle ships flying the Soviet banner there to 40.

Andre Babin, member of the Chamber of Deputies from Marseilles, informed the government that leaders of the 800 striking sailors were wiretapping passing ships, ordering them to put into port.

He cited the case of the Rouen ship Augustin le Borgne, out of China, which had avoided Marseilles on orders from her owner and was standing by for directions as to what port to proceed to. When the strikers' radio call was received, the crew demanded that the vessel be put into Marseilles. The captain refused, so the crew took command and sailed into the harbor.

SHIP STRIKE CONTINUES

Marseilles offices of steamship companies were crowded with several thousand passengers, who had been forced to leave them when the seamen decided to continue their occupation strikes.

The Marseilles seamen, after voting against the government compromise proposal to end their strike, again marched aboard the vessels in the harbor, shouting: "Soviets everywhere."

Girl Dying After Auto Crash

An automobile crash on the Lynn side of the new General Clarence R. Edwards memorial bridge today put Helen Perry, 24, of High street, Danvers, on the Lynn Hospital danger list.

Her companion and neighbor, Peggy Hall, 20, is in the same hospital less seriously injured.

The women were on the way home from a party in Boston. As they drove across the bridge, T. J. Roebuck, 25, who lives at the Salem Country Club, Peabody, was stopped by red lights guarding construction work.

The car operated by Miss Perry, police said, crashed into Roebuck's machine. Roebuck was home after superficial wounds had been treated.

Bank Workers Join Brussels Strike

Brussels, June 24 (NS)—Business suffered today as banks and insurance company employees joined the general strike and closing of the banks curbed the free flow of money.

Several hundred dreammakers "midnighters" also quit work.

DEMOCRATS ROBBED AS ROOSEVELT IS NAMED the floor and galleries, and the convention came to its close.

Prior to the actual mention of Mr. Roosevelt's name, Judge Mack had reviewed the four years that have passed since he placed Mr. Roosevelt in nomination at Chicago, and he gave the President full credit, braving over, for the recovery since 1932.

"When the crash came," he said, "neither the bankers nor big business nor the administration which had given them aid and comfort had any workable suggestions for relief. It is true that some aid was extended to certain favorite banks and institutions, but the people had lost confidence."

"The country, led by the Democratic party, turned to this young gallant for relief, for aid and help."

Under Mr. Roosevelt's administration, Judge Mack declared, "we have blazed a path to prosperity and security."

WHO COMPLAINS?

"Our faces are towards progress. We shall not turn back to the conflict between greed and pledged."

Who, he asked, is complaining against the administration of Mr. Roosevelt? Not, he answered, the farmer and the home owner who have been saved; not the millions and-a-half boys sheltered in CCC camps; not the millions of bank depositors, secured in their savings through FDIC; not the small merchants and the millions of workers who are still getting a living wage.

No, he cried, the criticism comes from those who themselves brought on the great depression, from the great financial institutions who have had their wings clipped by New Deal legislation.

"The issue in this campaign," he said, "is plain."

"The issue is now whether the people are going to retain control of the processes of government, or whether they are going to turn them back to the same small group whose destructive abuse of their former power was responsible for all our troubles."

The convention manager, after a lull in this morning, decided Mr. Roosevelt's act of nomination would take place tonight instead of this afternoon.

The plan was to put on a number of seconding speeches after Judge Mack's oration and then recess the convention until tonight, when not will be saved for Governor Lehigh H. Lehman.

The Roosevelt managers most warmly want Governor Lehman to run again for governor of New York. He recently announced he was not a candidate but since that time they have been "working" on him and the latest word is that the governor is softening under the pressure.

As the Governor of New York, Lehman will make one of the seconding speeches for Mr. Roosevelt's re-nomination. It was a nice gesture on the part of the Roosevelt managers to arrange a night session at which the Governor will get a national radio audience, and a referred place in the spotlight of the convention.

Before the actual nomination, the delegate were faced with a deluge of oratory such as few conventions have seen. There was Judge Mack's speech placing Mr. Roosevelt's name in nomination, and following him were the seconders from scores of states.

Every state wanted to make a seconding speech and the convention managers were hard put to hold down the list—unless they wanted the convention to run over the seconding speeches rather than the managers, so they tentatively decided to hold them down to about twenty. Even so, the seconding speeches will run far into the night.

URNS ON HEAT

Scheduled to get under way at noon, the convention, as usual, was late. The delegates were slow in coming to the hot, humid hall. To add to the discomfort, the weather man, who has been very kind to the Democrats, decided today to turn on the heat.

For the first time the spacious hall was uncomfortable. The delegates were shaking their coats right and left.

It was 1 o'clock before Senator Tom Robinson finally hanged his gavel, calling the convention to order. A reading clerk rattled off a lot of railroad announcements, which indicated the convention is about to fold up.

The invocation was pronounced by Rabbi William M. Friedman of Congregation Keneseth Israel, Philadelphia.

ALABAMA YIELDS

When the long prayer was ended, and a flock of routine announcements were made, Robinson banged his gavel and announced a rollcall of the states for the nomination of candidates for President.

"Alabama," bellowed the secretary.

Alabama yields to New York," came the response.

Without further ado, Robinson said to give him great pleasure "to introduce Judge John E. Mack, Roosevelt."

The floor and galleries laughed and applauded. Scattered applause punctuated the judge's speech. The first real applause came when Mack observed that Mr. Roosevelt came back into public life in 1924 "not because of any political ambition of his own, but solely in answer to the call of friendship."

SMITH'S PLEA NOW

This was an indirect allusion to Al Smith, who prevailed upon Roosevelt to accept the gubernatorial nomination in New York in 1928, when the new President was extremely reluctant to accept it.

Smith pleaded with Roosevelt in 1928 from a hotel room in Syracuse, over the long distance telephone to Warm Springs, Ga., to take the nomination.

It is a bit ironic now, and the delegates by their applause showed they appreciated it, that Smith has appeared to this convention to "put aside Franklin D. Roosevelt and nominate a genuine Democrat."

Landon Picks Horse for Vacation

By ROBERT HUMPHREYS
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Estes Park, Colo., June 26—Astonishing himself to an overnight change from Kansas "plain worm fishin'" to the intricacies of Colorado's fancy fly angling, Governor Alfred M. Landon today settled down to life on Cow Creek, a tiny, tumbling trout stream high in the Rocky Mountains.

Standing on the broad expanse of the front porch of the McInraw Ranch house, which he has leased for the summer, the G. O. P. presidential nominee, sporting tackle and trout flies, "reckoned" he could coast the three hundred feet that separates the porch and Cow Creek "if the wind wasn't against me."

Thus today the Kansas chief executive shed the worries of a Presidential candidate to begin a 10-day vacation here because, he said, "I sure need it."

Up at 8:30 this morning Governor Landon do, ed riding boots, corduroy trousers, a woolen shirt, which he left open at the throat, and an old hat and drove to a neighboring ranch to inspect horses in the hope of choosing one to ride during his stay here.

ALABAMA YIELDS

Worcester, June 26—Scores of horrified fellow-workers today saw Mrs. Lillian Hoffman plunge from a second-story factory window to death on a picnic street.

Her body was impaled and death was instantaneous. Mrs. Hoffman, 34, committed here from her home in Park street, Marlboro, for work in a Green street shoe factory.

Police say they were unable to determine whether the plunge was accidental or suicidal.

Mrs. Rita Gregory, a sister of the dead woman, said that Mrs. Hoffman had been in the best of spirits just before the tragedy.

She explained that her sister and herself had come to work together and that Mrs. Hoffman, who was a cheerful goody-goody to go to her bench on the second floor.

The next thing Mrs. Gregory knew she heard the screams of the workers.

the other states, and in Indiana it will be nip and tuck."

EXPONDS THEORIES

For the most part, Lemke played the role of good listener in the interview while the Rev. Fr. Coughlin expounded his monetary beliefs and confirmed his estrangement with the Roosevelt administration by a stiff attack on the President.

It comprised the Rev. Fr. Coughlin's first public utterances since he and Lemke announced formation of the third party. Of Roosevelt and the national Democratic administration, the priest said:

"We are supposed to be the best party. But as a magnet attracts steel, so does the President attract Communists. Every bird knows its own nest."

"We have published our platform," Rev. Coughlin continued. "But the Democratic platform already has been repudiated even before it has been completed. Their post laurel will write another as soon as he gets around to it, and enshrine it in beautiful metaphors."

NO FUNDS FINANCED

The priest estimated that support of Lemke by the National Union for Social Justice would give Lemke about 5,000,000 votes. He said the union would not contribute financially to the Congressman's campaign, but explained:

"We will give Mr. Lemke our moral support, and that is worth more than 5,000,000 votes to him, just as it was to Roosevelt in 1932."

He predicted dissolution of both the Republican and Democratic parties after "their defeat in November, adding:

"The two old parties heretofore will merge into one to fight us. We are Liberals. We expect to line up all the Democrats except the Communists to whom President Roosevelt's program comes closer than that of any other candidate."

CENTRAL BANK PLAN

The Catholic priest repeated his tirade against "international bankers" and said that if Lemke was elected, a central bank of issue would be set up, all existing currency would be called in by government, and "the bankers' twenty billion dollar investment in government bonds would be wiped out."

Lemke plans to drive to Chicago to establish national headquarters for the union party after completing his conferences with the Rev. Fr. Coughlin here.

WRITE IN BLACK WIRE SEIZURE MADE FINAL

Washington, June 26 (U.S.)—The final and permanent injunction halting the Black senatorial committee from searching private telegrams through blanket subpoenas on telegraph companies has been signed by Chief Justice Wheat in District of Columbia Supreme Court.

Chief Justice Wheat had ordered a temporary injunction three months ago against the practice. Yesterday's decree put the final stamp of judicial disapproval on acts of the committee which is headed by Senator Black (D), Alabama.

Action came in the suit brought by the Chicago law firm of Winston, Strawn & Shaw, headed by Elias Strawn, former president of the American Bar Association and the U. S. Chamber of Commerce.

ATTACKED SEIZURE
When the Western Union Telegraph Company was ordered by the Black committee to turn over all telegrams sent and received by the Strawn firm, Strawn registered a vigorous protest.

In the name of his clients whose private affairs would thus be revealed to the Black committee seeking to snoop the messages, Strawn declared obedience to the subpoena would be a violation of their constitutional rights.

The court decreed Strawn was entitled to keep the messages safe from prying eyes of Senate inquisitors, and cited the constitutional guarantees against unreasonable search and seizure.

HEARST'S CHARGES
Another phase of the committee's action is under attack by William Randolph Hearst, who has been granted a special appeal by the United States Court of Appeals on his petition to force the Black committee to discontinue telegrams seized by methods found unlawful in the Strawn case.

The publisher charged the Black probe and the federal communications commission with conspiracy to deprive citizens of their constitutional guarantees. The commission, which aided the Black committee in the illegal searching, accepted the court's direction to desist.

Gen. Sherrill, Olympic Aid, Dies

Paris, June 26 (U.S.)—Rugby-General Charles H. Sherrill, noted American member of the International Olympic committee and former United States ambassador to Turkey, died suddenly here from a heart attack. He was 60 years old. The retired army officer, diplomat, world traveler and author died a little more than a month before the 11th renewal at Berlin of the modern Olympic games, in which he had devoted many years of untiring effort.

General Sherrill was a close friend of Premier Benito Mussolini of Italy and other European statesmen.

Born on April 13, 1867, Sherrill graduated from the Yale Law School and practiced at the bar in New York for ten years.

He acted as U. S. minister to Argentina from 1909 to 1911, and in 1922 he was appointed ambassador to Turkey by President Hoover.

U. S. to Build 3 More Prisons

Washington, June 26 (US)—Steady increase in the number of federal prisoners throughout the country caused prison officials to press plans for immediate construction of three new jails authorized by Congress.

Reports to Sanford Bates, director of the federal bureau of prisons, showed 15,637 criminals are crowded into institutions designed to accommodate only 13,743. At the same time it was learned 549 federal prisoners are being held in state, county and local prisons and jails.

Sites of two of the new institutions have been tentatively selected, one in Sandstone, Minn., and the other at San Pedro, Cal. The former jail will cost $422,000 and the latter $482,000, it is estimated. Officials are now weighing the advisability of placing the third institution in either Florida or Oklahoma.

VICTOR HUGO'S IN LOS ANGELES. The world of fashion and of Hollywood calls Victor Hugo's charming, palm-studded Garden Room "Paris in Los Angeles." Gay groups of people gather here to enjoy the delights of Hugo's famous cuisine. And, as the diners pause between courses to enjoy their Camels, Hugo himself gives the nod of approval. "Our guests know fine tobacco as well as fine food," he says. "They have made Camels the outstanding favorite here."

IN THE RYDER CUP TEAM. Henry Picard (right) is rated the best golfer at full iron shots. Like so many of the greatest American champions, Picard smokes Camels. "I know that Camels set you right!" he says. "Smoking Camels is an aid to my digestion. I'm quite a smoker and I'll say that Camels never get on my nerves."

"YOU KNOW WHAT nervousness and eating fast can do to digestion," says Claire Huntington, busy public stenographer. "I find that smoking Camels at mealtime makes food taste ever so much better and helps digestion. And a Camel gives me a 'lift'—makes my cares slide away, brings back new energy and cheer."

Camels stimulate digestion in a pleasant, natural way
...increase alkalinity

The human digestion responds unfavorably to nervousness and strain. It is definitely encouraged by smoking Camels. Scientific studies show clearly the manner in which Camels aid digestion. Using sensitive scientific apparatus, it is possible to measure accurately the increase in digestive fluids—alkaline digestive fluids—that follows the enjoyment of Camel's costlier tobaccos. This has now been done repeatedly. The same studies demonstrate that an abundant flow of digestive fluids is important also to the enjoyment of food. Make Camel your cigarette for steady smoking. The flavor of Camel's costlier tobaccos never tires your taste. For a welcome sense of well-being, for a cheery "lift," and for digestion's sake, enjoy Camels. They never get on your nerves. They are gentle on your throat. You'll like the firmness of Camels too—no loose shreds annoy you.

During and after meals, Camels bring a sense of well-being and good feeling. That's why people say:

"—for Digestion's sake...smoke Camels"

GOLD-CUP WINNER! George Reis wound up his speedboat, El Lagarto, to over 65 miles an hour to win the Gold Cup Trophy for the third straight time. "I'm a Camel smoker," says this outstanding speedboat driver. "I can bravely smoke Camels, and enjoy that feeling of well-being that goes with good digestion. Camels set me right!"

MRS. WILLIAM I. HOLLINGSWORTH, JR., popular Californian, well-known in the social life of New York and London, as well as the West Coast. "How natural it is to smoke Camels when dining," says Mrs. Hollingsworth. "They are so mild. Camels please my taste and aid digestion."

Annual Cohasset Carnival Attracts Members of Smart Set

By BETTY ALDEN

THIS YEAR'S Cohasset Carnival was an outstanding success in spite of the weather. . . We know this is usually said of events which occur on rainy days, but in this case it was just the opposite. . . The day was so warm and clear that everyone was loathe to tear themselves away from strolling and bathing, or just relaxing in their sunny gardens, but the attraction of the carnival with its many shows and midway, proved strong enough to make them sacrifice their seaside fun for the afternoon. . .

The Carnival was held, as usual, on the Common, with the three churches which it benefits, surrounding the scene of action. . .

Most of the youngsters arrived with pets of one sort or another tucked under their arms, or leading them on a string. . . For them the pet show and the possibility of winning a blue ribbon for their little four-legged playmates was the most exciting prospect of the day, with the exception, of course, of the ice cream and soda pop. . .

As is usually the case in a pet show, the animals in the competition covered a wide variety. . . with puppies and kittens predominating. . . The smallest entry was a tiny hand-painted turtle about as big as a postage stamp. . . The most beautiful new-born calf shared honors with little Jane Cox's Great Dane as the largest. . .

Outside the pet show visitors to the Carnival could try their hand at games of chance (all the proceeds, of course, for charity) attend movies in the Town Hall, see the hobby show in the parish house, attend the fashion show in Mrs. Gammon's garden, or visit the gayly awing booths to make purchases of books, flowers and so forth. . .

Many of Cohasset's residents do not spend all their time yachting and swimming and enjoying the other summer pastimes, but fill their idle moments with interesting hobbies. . . varied and interesting products of a number of such hobbies were on exhibit in the Unitarian parish house. . . Those who know how active Mrs. Prescott Cummer is in social affairs, cannot understand how she found the time to design and decorate a large doll house for her little daughter. . . The Cummer's bazaar indulged his hobby of carpentering and built the house, and Mrs. Cummer furnished it completely, with crisp little ruffled curtains, hand embroidered bed spreads, and all kinds of gadgets to capture the fancy of a little girl. . .

Interior decorating and interesting furniture is also the hobby of Mrs. Roland Crampton, who loaned two of her prize possessions, a pair of old lacquered tea chests, for the exhibit. . . A corner cabinet suspended above the tea chests contained Mrs. Crampton's collection of Staffordshire china. . . To our minds Mrs. C. Griggs Plant's hobby of collecting fine editions of rare old books is most interesting. . . Several of her finest treasures, autographed in the Napoleonic period, were on display. . .

Style Show in the Garden

IN AN ADJOINING ROOM a rack of formidable looking antique pistols and flint locked stock check by jowl with the slender delicacy of Mrs. T. Fred Stoddard's collection of old glass. . . Two oil paintings by Dr. Henry Howe were outstanding in a roomful of drawings and photographic studies. . .

When four chimes sounded from the steeple of St. Stephen's, all Cohasset's fashion minded ladies forsook the rest of the Carnival and found seats in Mrs. Gammon's garden to watch the style show. . . Jane Bancroft and her sister, Jessie Cox, again did their bit for Cohasset's worthy charities by serving as mannequins, as did Annette Hollis, Jane Tuckerman and Virginia Ayres Bishop. . . The newest dress had a chance to practice keeping in step with Jackie Marshall's rhythm and Anne Whipple, and Mary Wilson modeled the clothes with all the poise of veteran mannequins. . .

Even the lovely gowns in the fashion show couldn't keep Alma Bird Bartow's mind off the big charity dance at the South Shore Country Club, which she is helping to run tonight, and she was reminding everyone that it is to be a joy of fun and well worth while attending. . . Roaming around with her young son, Howard, Mrs. Hollis T. Gleason was an attractive figure in a white sport dress with emerald green tie and buttons. . . Mrs. Paul Revere's little son, Paul, Jr., was a great boom to her sales total. . . He looked so cunning that everyone stopped to admire him and incidentally, they bought cigarettes from his mother as they chatted back and forth. . .

Mary Davidson was eyeing the fashions with more than casual interest, for she is a trousseau minded these days. . . her wedding in August presents a problem in selecting clothes, however, for she will almost be an autumn bride and must have a fall and winter wardrobe. . . Her sister, Mrs. George Murr, 2d, was with her and together they made notes of some of the darker things that she thought suitable for her honeymoon. . . Mary, in case you are wont to confuse who's who in the way of fiancées, is engaged to Sam Ayres, Jr., also of Cohasset. . . and she is the daughter of the William J. Davidsons. . .

Mrs. Fred Thayer seemed to be getting a big kick out of helping to run the midway and her friends, Mrs. Frank Sawyer and Mrs. James Curry, were busy all afternoon with one booth or another. . . Still others noted about were Martin and Joan Chapin, Betty Adams, Mrs. Hugh Bancroft and Mrs. Charles Wilson. . .

Crash Can't Halt Sweeney Bridal Plans

CAR mishaps are nothing in Grace Sweeney's life. The show must go on, is her motto.

A recent unfortunate auto accident had no effect on her wedding plans and chances are that tomorrow she'll be one of the season's most radiant brides when she becomes Mrs. Charles Ecker Duffy in St. Clement's Church in the Back Bay.

The ceremony has been set for ten o'clock and Rev. Joseph Walsh, pastor of St. John's Seminary, will officiate. Ray Gardner of the Hotel Puritan will be the master of the reception and breakfast after the nuptial mass.

The bride, one of the most popular members of Boston's young set, will be given in marriage by her father, Frank A. Sweeney, and Lauretta Walsh will be her honor attendant.

Also walking in the bridal procession are Marie Duffy, widow of the bridegroom and Dorothy Moley of Brookline.

The bridegroom-elect's brother, James B. Duffy of Greenburg, Pa., will be best man and the bride's brother, Francis heads the usher corps. Other ushers will be Austin Phillips of Clinton, Dr. Arthur J. Leonard of Milton and John Ecker of Dorchester.

Mrs. John Manning of West Roxbury entertained at a tea and shower the other day at the Ritz Carlton in honor of the bride and Mrs. Francis R. Sweeney of Newton Highlands gave a luncheon supper at her home.

Grace, whose parents resided at Dorchester, was educated at Boston Teachers' College and is a member of the faculty of the Martin Training School.

Mr. Duffy, the son of Mr. and Mrs. James V. Duffy of Dorchester, well of Chestnut Hill. The Rev. George Kent transferred to Boston College High School.

"WHEN I LOVED YOU"

By Hazel Livingston

CHAPTER 18

"Who's that Mrs. Violet Johnson—the Honorable Mrs. Cuthbert Johnson you read about in the fashion magazines who's so much more exciting than her daughter? Edith would know. Let me see—what was I talking about?"

"Aunt Frances," Jan said dutifully, but to her relief Evelyn said no more about it. She was free to slip away, get herself ready for the last afternoon with Lowell.

It came in the little green roadster he always drove. They had lunch in a place that was crowded. "We should have gone to the Palace," he said, gravely, and she looked at him adoringly, because he even thought of going there.

Afterwards they drove through the park, and walked through the aquarium, not that they wanted to see the fish, but because they didn't know where else to go.

This was their last afternoon. It was so precious they didn't know what to do with it.

At 5 o'clock they found themselves at the beach. Brought was there, drank coffee out of thick China mugs.

They walked on the beach, away from the city, and saw a ship coming in to sea.

"That's where you're going," "Tomorrow," he said.

They held hands, sitting side by side in the green roadster. He wanted to kiss her and hold her tight, to tell her everything that was in his heart, but there were others parked so close, so many couples all around.

"Isn't it getting late?" she asked finally.

"I suppose so," he said dutifully. He looked at his watch, thinking miserably of his dinner date, of leaving Jan on this, their last night. Why didn't she tell him not to go, he wondered?

Why didn't she tell him she would forget him and never see him again? A pall of disappointment settled over them both. They sat silent, a little apart. Then he started the engine, drove her home.

Evelyn had meant to go to the pier with Jan, but at the last moment one of the female domestics had called her, and she had to go alone. Jan felt shy. Not knowing which street car to take, she quite daringly to spend the money for a taxi, and she took the long blocks to the pier, passing a small building, a small terrace where she always had been.

On the big covered pier, already crowded with people and taxis and cars piled high with baggage, she walked and looked alone, the book she'd brought for a present, held tightly under her arm.

The ship moored to the wharf looked like a floating palace, through the open gate. At the gangplank small looking officers and deck stewards in crisp white coats stood, smiling and important. Little groups of officers, presiding over the ship, and the boat was waiting with the rays, laughing, excited crowd of voyagers and friends.

Lovers Meet

On the upper deck she saw him standing by the rail, alone.

"Lowell!" she called, and he turned to look.

He made some inaudible answer, and disappeared. Two minutes later he was on the pier, pushing his way to her side. "I thought you weren't coming!" it seemed almost like a miracle.

"It took so long to walk," she said, "I thought I had all kinds of time but the time came and Lowell wasn't here."

"I would have been for you and me," he said, "but I was late."

"You were late?" she asked, "but I was here."

"I was here," he said, "but I was late."

"I was here," he said, "but I was late."

Congress-Chosen Acetate Suit For Sleek Effect

"ALL WOMEN are glamorous in evening gowns," so a knowing young man told me. Without realizing it, he paid a tribute to today's fashions. Take the tip, and in your summer wardrobe include the evening gown of bathing fashion. It's the dressmaker suit we're talking about. And the Fashion Congress paid the dressmaker suit proper tribute by tagging nearly every one that appeared at the last session.

Here is one, modeled by Miss Louise Ranney of Wellesley Farms. Sleek acetate, it is a "delicious" shade of aquamarine, with tiny dots of bell-blonde red. Notice the round collar halter. The evening gown bodice. The length of skirt, so kind to thigh and knee lines. Not shown with it, but purchasable at the same spot is a knee-length evening cape with a hood. And if the model were not perched on the end of a diving board, she'd have worn the brilliant red straw coolie hat with bangle-bangles of cotton (nothing more than large-sized ball fringe that's used on curtains).

For shopping information on this Fashion Congress selection, phone Anne Brink, Fashion Editor, Liberty 4000, or write her at the Boston Evening American.

A Goodbye Kiss

"Oh, there's putting us off!" It's the visitors ashore again.

"All visitors ashore. All visitors ashore, please."

"All visitors ashore?"

One or two bated guests were assisted down the gangplank.

The white-clothed waiter, ready to help if the waiters were being called.

The ship's hand was passing people were waving, some, serpentine, confetti.

He left going. He won't leave me, she thought wildly. They were still holding hands. "You'll be left," she said through lips so dry that they would hardly form words.

"I'll be left," he said.

Then he came back and kissed her quickly and ran up the gang plank.

He stood expectant, waiting for her to turn and gaze away from him and back again.

But she turned and looked at him, and he found a way to the pier.

With a final mighty blast the great ship began to move away from the wharf.

The little rib-boat of green water between her legs foisted and changed. Slowly, she saw that it barely needed to move at all, the ship made its way into the harbor.

The hand still played, people were waving, some, serpentine, confetti.

Plants for Fragrance

It is well known that plants which have a strong fragrance are very desirable for use in the home. Some of the most fragrant plants are those which are used in the garden, such as roses, lilies, and carnations. These plants are not only beautiful to look at, but they also have a pleasant smell which can be enjoyed from a distance. In addition, many of these plants are also useful for medicinal purposes. For example, lavender is known for its calming properties, and eucalyptus is often used to relieve congestion. Therefore, it is a good idea to have a variety of fragrant plants in your garden to enjoy their beauty and benefits.

Make Your Own Slip Covers

SO SIMPLE, slip covers are, when you go about making them in the right order.

First, there's the pinned-up stage; second, the basted-up stage; and third, the stitched-up stage, as sketches show.

First waste time cutting a pattern, then pin your pattern to the chair, and then baste it on. Leave a 1/2 inch allowance for the seam, and you are ready to machine-stitch. Quickest seam finishes are a French seam or an ornamental cord whipped on after the seams are stitched.

These details are all explained in the new book, "Slip Covers Successfully," which tells how to measure chairs before buying cords. Suggests materials. One chapter on upholstering. Clear, simple, reassuring.

"Your Figure, Madame!"

By IDA JEAN KAIN

THERE IS NO predicting what will happen on a reducing diet. Maybe you'll lose, maybe you won't. You may even gain! If you are one of those contrary reducers who gain weight on a low-calorie diet, you will be interested in knowing there's a scientific reason. Unreasonable as it may seem, the scales can go up even on a diet deficient in calories.

The explanation is that weight change is determined not only by a gain or loss in fat, but by a gain or loss in water as well. Although you may have lost weight, increased water retention registers as a gain.

The average reducer, naturally enough, cannot understand how this can happen when she is hungry, and concludes that her ancestors, are or glands are to blame.

Water-drinking has no connection with this physiological process of water storage. On the contrary, it is very important that the reducer drink adequate water to carry off waste tissue. At least eight glasses should be taken daily, between meals.

Salt, however, does seem to be a factor in water storage, and in related weight loss a minimum of salt should be used.

Now, if ever, in the warm weather, is the time to avoid normal salt. Let Ida Jean Kain help you with her leaflets, "Reduced Ten Commandments" and "Vegan Diet." These leaflets are a large all-in-one, stamped envelope to this paper.

Optimistic Bidding

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

It is all very well to look askance at optimistic bidding and to say that it will lose in the long run. But it is quite another thing to resent the optimism enough to double, just when you have most reason to believe the opponents have stumbled into the right contract.

In the hand below, East cannot be blamed for feeling "challenged" by the strong bidding of the opponents, but the very strength of the bidding should have warned him not to direct declarer's play by doubling.

South dealer. Neither side vulnerable.

The bidding:
South West North East
1♣ Pass 2♣ Pass
2♥ Pass 4♥ (1) Pass
4♣ Pass 5♣ Double (2)
Pass Pass Redouble (3) Pass

(1) A hand overbid.
(2) East had made too free and perhaps fifty new double points to gain by this double. Hardy worthwhile.
(3) North at least was consistent in his optimism. He opened the Ace of spades and East dropped the encouragements. South then took the heart finesse and cashed the Ace of hearts. The Queen of spades was ruffed and the Ace of King of clubs was laid down, declarer discarding a low heart.

A low club was ruffed in declarer's hand. Next a heart was ruffed in the dummy and a club returned. In an effort to stop the cross-ruff East put up the Queen of trumps, but South overruffed with the Ace and ruffed his last heart with dummy's last trump.

When the club was led from dummy at the twelfth trick, East could prevent South from making his Jack of trumps for the eleventh trick.

FINDS ALL-BRAN BETTER THAN PILLS, SALTS, AND OILS

This Natural Food Relieved His Constipation

We quote from his letter: "So I decided to make a fair trial (of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN), with the result that I felt much improved. I have quit all laxatives and pills."

"For 34 years, I had to take pills, salts, oils, teas, or other fluids, which did more harm than good. At last, I found it in our breakfast cereal for the whole family."

"Most low in 'bulk' often lead to constipation. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides generous 'bulk' in gentle form. This 'bulk' absorbs moisture, forms a soft mass, and gently exercises and cleanses the system. ALL-BRAN also furnishes vitamin B and iron."

Two tablespoons daily are usually sufficient. How much better to use this natural food in place of patent medicines.

Use as a cereal with milk or cream, or in cooking. ALL-BRAN is much more effective than all-bran products. It is sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek, Mich.

SQUIG'S Arlington FRANKFURTS

On a diet of slightly more than half her calorie requirement, an obese young woman lost 10 pounds for eating Squire's Arlington Frankfurts the first two days she gained weight. After the third day, however, she suddenly began to lose, and in three days lost six pounds.

From Dr. Newburgh's investigation it is seen that failure to lose on a calorie deficit is always temporary. A restricted weight loss is only a matter of days, and if the reducer holds out, sooner or later, this water weight is adjusted and the accumulated loss is registered. Anyone can reduce

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Should Young Wife Remain Loyal to Man Jailed For Larceny?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Alice M.'s letter will interest women, married women especially. Here is proof that life is not always as we make it; that often circumstances beyond our control bring sorrow and heartaches only the bravest can endure.

There are at least two solutions to Alice M.'s problem. Many might prefer the easier one, divorce and dependence on municipal charity until another man came along. But I prefer the harder way, keeping faith with the marital vows, earning the happiness that must come.

"I have been married three years," Alice M. writes, "and I have two darling boys. My husband, unemployed when I married him, did his best to support me, which was not too good. It was while he was working temporarily for an automobile concern that he was accused of stealing tools. Arrest, conviction and a two-year prison sentence followed in rapid succession. The day my baby was born there was no money, no food, no clothes for the child. The city, kindly, came to my rescue, procuring medical care, made it possible for my tiny son to live."

"What, Miss Fairfax, shall I do? Friends urge me to divorce my husband, who will have to stay in prison for at least a year, in half more. It is the sensible thing to do, they say. But I, blinded by love, probably, am as devoted to my husband as I was the day I married him."

"His pride crumbled and everything seeming hopeless, he needs me now more than ever. My only fear is that, broken by prison, he will be a confirmed criminal, utterly unfit to assume a father's responsibilities. Is there danger of that?"

"I value your advice and I shall act accordingly."

MY DEAR FRIEND:

Remain loyal to the man you married. That's the thing to do. Wait him as frequently as possible, work for his early release. You might obtain a divorce without too much effort, but that would not solve your problem. Try would still be done in an effort to get him out of prison. You would have the additional fear of losing your children, for it is not easy for a widow, real or otherwise, to work and raise a family in the same time.

When your husband is released, value your advice and I shall act accordingly.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Soap as an Antiseptic

By ROYAL S. COPLAND, M. D.

NO ONE will question that cleanliness is one of the prime essentials of good health.

Modern civilization could not survive without the preservation of pure water supplies and safe methods for sewage and waste disposal. Fortunately for us, many of the water-borne and filth-borne diseases are no longer as prevalent as in former years.

In 1900 typhoid fever caused nearly 36 deaths per 100,000 of the population in the United States; in 1923 it was responsible for less than five deaths per 100,000. Contrast these figures with conditions in 1934 when 23 of our largest cities had no deaths at all from this disease. Typhoid is spread by contaminated water or food supplies. In spite of the fact that typhoid and other of these so-called filthborne diseases have been greatly reduced, as I have indicated, they still prevail, not having been completely eradicated as they should have been. It is the opinion of public health officials that in most instances such cases can be traced to personal negligence and the failure to practice personal hygiene.

The importance of teaching school children the necessity of personal hygiene is apparent. Hands are carriers of germs and parasites. If we keep them clean, we lessen the danger of getting unpleasant ailments. The best way of keeping the hands clean, and whether it is necessary to use an antiseptic. Soap is an antiseptic. If used frequently with adequate rubbing, it will destroy bacteria. Of course, the soap used should be pure and readily soluble in water. A famous specialist in skin diseases recently said: "Soap is one of the most important factors in preventing the spread of disease, not only on account of their germicidal action on the common organisms, but also because no antiseptic can replace cleanliness."

Beauty for the Baby

New 'Cosmetics' for Baby Preserve the Flawless Skin of Childhood

By ARLINE GOULD

BEAUTY for the baby! A new idea in the world of feminine loveliness. To capture forever the elusive wonderment of a little child's smooth pink skin. To prepare her in babyhood for exquisite beauty when she becomes a woman.

If you have a little daughter or favorite niece whose skin has the butterfly wing enchantment of childhood, you have probably often caught your breath with tender emotion and wished that she could carry the same precious loveliness into womanhood.

There is one young mother who decided that something must be done to preserve the flawless perfection of her daughter's skin. In consultation with her family physician and a highly-trained cosmetic chemist a formula for baby cream was evolved which has fully justified the effort.

Lillian Allen of London, now aged four and a half, is the daughter for whom the formula was found. So successful was the formula in keeping Anna's delicate baby skin free from the effects of sharp wind, cold weather, heat and changes of temperature, that it was decided to make the cream available to other lovely children.

A mild bland soap with neither filler nor perfume and a wonderful talcum powder, lightly scented with rose, were two other achievements worked out by Anna's mother. Now Anna becomes the youngest figure in the cosmetic world since a special "beauty kit" for

CORRECT MANNERS

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

My kind and I have recently taken up housewarming in a suite. We are just settled and we would like to have some form of "housewarming."

There are, in all, about twenty-eight or thirty friends who we would like to entertain, and for financial reasons, we would like to make the one affair do for a while at least. Although our suite is fairly large, particularly the living-room, we could not quite comfortably have all these people in the house at the same time. Do you think that a cocktail party on Saturday afternoon from five to six thirty (as we both go to business) would be nice?

If you think so, will you please suggest about how often cocktails should be passed around, as I certainly would not want it overdone?

A cocktail party... from five to six thirty or seven... on a Saturday afternoon would be an excellent form of party for your housewarming. As a matter of fact, nowadays this is the customary type of party given for a housewarming. I wish I could answer your second question... as to how often a housewarming should be given. This decision takes a considerable judgment and an "even eye." There are usually some guests at a cocktail party who seem to demand constant watching... a subtle watching, but WATCHING.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on Good Manners submitted by readers.)

Dinner Menus

FROM MARTHA LEE'S FRIDAY MORNING BROADCAST OVER STATION WREX

We are fast becoming a nation of week-enders, spending these long, strenuous days in the open air at the beach or in the country.

We are divided into two groups—those who do the entertaining and those who receive it. For accommodating crowds, entertaining must be simple and informal.

Invited guests who are congenial are those that have a common interest. A small group of agreeable people is a pleasure to both guests and hostess.

DINNER PARTY HINTS

For the dinner party your most attractive china, crystal and linens are used. The table is decorated with flowers, which should be low enough for the guests to see over. Place plates are not used. But bread and butter plates with butter knives are placed on the table.

Serve the fruit or vegetable juice cocktail, with crackers or canapés accompanied in the living room or on the terrace. This service allows the hostess to be placed on the table before the guests come into the dining room and saves confusion when there is no maid.

A fruit cup should be served in the dining room as the first course. The salad may be served with the dinner or as a separate course. Green salad with a French dressing is preferable.

The dessert course should be light and not overly rich. Sherbet with wafers is a pleasing finish. Coffee may be served at the table or in the living room, the latter lending an air of charm and hospitality.

SIMPLE MENU

The menu for an informal dinner—this is my first day at the beach, simple food, tasty and well balanced.

Try the new recipe for Tomato French Dressing for tossed salads or for the living room, the latter lending an air of charm and hospitality.

SHAKE WELL in a Jar. Will last indefinitely.

CHAPTER 35

THERE WAS something primal, feral, in the way Katherine said "that woman" when she asked me if I thought that Ruth Hayes, the woman who was sharing the South American wilderness camp with her brother and Katherine's husband, had intercepted the letter I had written to Jack.

It told me a great deal, that touch of ferocity in Katherine's usually gentle voice. Her love for her husband was not wholly dead.

"The probably acted as his secretary then," I went on, "opening his letters and reading them to him. And, of course, as her brother is head of the expedition, there is no one to question her actions. In all probability she opens the mail and distributes it. What's so easy for her to examine Jack's mail before she gives it to him and to destroy any she does not wish him to have?"

"That's a pretty neat idea," Katherine asked. "Would she dare?"

"Would she dare?" I repeated scornfully, warning to my subject. "A woman possessing the colossal audacity necessary to send you that letter which I am more than ever convinced Jack never saw would not stop at anything to gain her end."

No one ever accused Ruth Hayes of lack of brain or resourcefulness. She is cunning enough to deduce that after you had read her letter you would not write to Jack unless you enclosed it in an envelope bearing the firm name so that you might insure his getting it.

"My letter!" she repeated indignantly. "I did not write him." "In all probability she knows nothing of it," I told her. "I am sure she is not. But I earnestly, if ever, wish him my sympathy. His are unobtainable. I am afraid."

"So as Jack," she said, "I never could get him to write an answer. I intended to. But until this last trip, his letters to me were always read by even if so gloomy and pessimistic that they made my heart sick. But I have been so long since I have heard from him. You don't know how I miss him."

Her eyes widened in sudden terror. I interrupted her. "No! I don't think anything has happened to him," I said firmly. "You know as well as I do that you would have been notified if he had been so long since I have heard from him. You don't know how I miss him."

"Or good news, either," she asserted dully. "They are always very prompt in relaying messages."

"There you are!" I told her triumphantly. "No news— you know the rest of the quotation."

"I hope it's true, the rest of it," she said, still in the same flat tones. "But don't you see now why I must go away and hide where I can't find me? I must not let Jack down. I must not let him know I'm in a fit of every doubt until he, himself, comes and asks me to leave him."

"Or mind playing father—or rather mother—confessor?" she asked. "I feel as if I must talk to someone I love or go mad."

"I never have asked for your confidence, Katherine," I answered, "but you ought to know how honored I should feel, if you decide to tell me what's in your heart."

"I might echo what you said a few minutes ago," she said with a smile. "I wish I knew what I did feel. But one thing is certain."

HEAT PLISTERS MIDWEST, CROP LOSS GROWS

Chicago, June 26.—Temperatures above 100 battered the drought-baked central plains as border of grasshoppers and cicadas crawled through wide strips of withering crops, adding hourly to damage that already has reached tens of millions of dollars.

"The most serious situation we've ever faced," was the word from many sections in a survey of Universal Service.

Cattle were being shipped out of the Dakotas by the railroad because pastures were burned dry and the raisers faced the need of selling the undernourished animals for what they could get or see them perish.

WORST IN YEARS

The insect plague in eastern Nebraska and western Iowa was termed "worst in a generation" and was becoming an increasing peril in the Dakotas and even as far east as Michigan.

Abnormal infestation prevails also in Kansas, west of the Rocky Mountain states and Wyoming.

To fight the pest, the drought-stricken farmers have applied for federal appropriation during the year, but the department of Agriculture experts confessed the fund would be woefully inadequate.

Only sporadic epidemics fell during the day, and some were in sight for the hatched hatching. However, showers were predicted for daily-burned Montana and Wyoming.

Indicative of the temperatures, the 110 recorded in two North Dakota towns was equalled at Mitchell, S. D., while Pierre, S. D., had 106 and Huron, S. D., 104.

NO MILK COWS

"Four-fifths of the state is suffering from serious lack of moisture," commented Commissioner of Agriculture and Labor Theodore Marshall of North Dakota, adding:

"Not even milk cows can be maintained in some sections unless pastures come back."

"The worst drought I ever encountered," said Mr. A. Kennedy, Works Progress Administration head in South Dakota, who declared:

"Livestock is being shipped out by trainloads from some areas."

A. P. Bruce, Montana's commissioner of agriculture, told Universal Service:

Husband Will Use of Bedroom

The will of Mrs. Estelle M. Pike, Central street, Saugus, died in Salem probate court today, showed the deceased left nothing to her husband, Clarence, except the free use of a bedroom in her home.

The will stated the husband might also have "reasonable use" of the bath and other rooms.

The estate, valued at $10,000, was bequeathed to a niece, Miss Grace B. Pike, also of Central street, Saugus.

Belgian Strikers Quit

Brussels, June 25 (AP). Government authorities estimated today that 100,000 of Belgium's 170,000 striking miners had returned to work.

'Work for Both of Us,' He Said

Married life for this attractive Rosindale girl, Mrs. Muriel Ham, became a bit confused when hubby quit his job, told her that she would have to go to work and provide for the support of both, she testified in Suffolk probate court. Her suit for divorce was taken under advisement.

Told to Get Job, Wife Asks Decree

Four days after their marriage her husband gave up his job and demanded she go to work to support them both, Mrs. Muriel Ham, of Poplar street, Rosindale, testified in Suffolk probate court today.

Mrs. Ham was seeking a divorce from Robert P. Ham on the charge of cruelty. Judge Frederick J. Dillon took the case under advisement.

Witnessing Mrs. Ham and she was married in 1935 and lived on North St. in Rosindale and that she had better go to work to support the two of them. Her brother, Albert Whitaker, of Rosindale, was also present.

PROFITS LISTED IN DOLAN TRIAL

Reading from a voluminous 173 page deposition obtained from Edward J. Supple, Thomas H. Mahony, counsel for Edmund L. Dolan, in the suit through which the city seeks to recover $200,000 today related the net profits of Legal Securities Corporation which Supple once headed never exceeded $100 a year.

Supple in his deposition stated he was "pretty sure" that Dolan, then city treasurer, was not present when the loan of $200,000 which stated Legal Securities was made at the Federal National Bank.

Supple who was paid $100,000 to relinquish his presidency of the firm which the city contends was set up by Dolan as a "dummy" organization through which to buy bonds for the city, refused to reveal in his deposition his salary during the period.

He admitted Miss White was paid $10,000 a year salary when the Legal Securities Corporation made out its income tax returns.

When asked by Special Counsel George R. Barnum who procured the deposition, he remembered the transfer of $100,000 from the Legal Securities Corporation to E. L. Dolan Co. Supple replied he "didn't care to remember."

Slaps to Life Term In Prison Win 6 Women Decrees

Slapping, punching, choking other women, desertion, non-support and a husband's life term for murder were causes put forth today by six women who obtained uncontested divorces in Middlesex probate court.

Judge John J. Poland listened to the tales of marital strife and granted all women their freedom.

Mrs. Bernice H. Flynn of Somerville obtained her release from Harry T. Flynn of Chicago, there-down the front stairs, refusing to allow her to return.

Mrs. Edith Allison of Medford, charging her husband Frederick W. Allison, with cruelty asserted her husband bragged about going around with "other girls."

OPEN MONDAY, THURSDAY AND SATURDAY EVENINGS FOR YOUR CONVENIENCE

THIS IS LIFE

By Robert E. Rogers

At least two of the delegation chairmen at Philadelphia fell over their own feet on Wednesday during that interminable process of calling the roll of states to register the various honorary appointments which will give every important delegation at least some kind of a title, whether or not any power goes with it. One of the appointments was for "member of the committee to notify the candidate for President of his nomination." One after another of the rubber stamps solemnly repeated the formula until it came toward the end of the list, one of the western states, I fancy. Then a chairman bowed for the formula—with a difference. He said "member of the committee to notify President Roosevelt of his nomination."

Probably Only Thinking Aloud

I couldn't tell whether anyone noticed it or not. Probably not. The honorable gentleman was only thinking out loud, even if he did smash the elaborate fiction hitherto so religiously adhered to.

"And just a few moments later the spokesman for Puerto Rico, speaking with a strong Latin accent, made another gaffe. Apparently he was honestly bewildered. This time it was the hoary and ancestral rumormongers which appoints an honorary vice-president and an honorary secretary to the convention from each and every one of the 48 states, each with an assistant to boot.

This was too much for Puerto Rico. He got it all mixed up: "Honorary President to the Convention, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Honorary Vice-President to the Convention, Jack Garner."

That was the only laugh I gathered during the inglorious noon session on Wednesday. The rest of it was the presentation of unknown and frightened anonymous from Oklahoma and Texas "just to say a few words over the air."

Young. In it Miss Burke plays a rather spoiled, petulant, mercenary individual with whom you become very irritated.

Then there was an hour of stage and screen and radio stars, captained by a gentleman named Dowling, who is said to be the President's favorite comedian, excluding Rex Tugwell, and whom I for one found pretty dull.

One remembers Will Rogers on much the same occasion four years ago. There was, by the way, a very brief and perfunctory tribute to Will Rogers before the energetic Dowling dashed on into his own brand of raucous and commonplace humor. There were precious few celebrities to be found and those were pretty non-committal and unfunny.

Sees Contrast Between Conventions

The most interesting was a Cherokee princess with a sweet voice who sang without accompaniment, against a couple of bands and the organ, what purported to be a Navajo drinking song but which sounded to be more like a keen over the late Al Smith, Joe Ely, et al. (a different all time case.)

It is quite obvious that the delegates at Philadelphia do not care whether school keeps or not. Why should they? Obviously everything is so cut-and-dried and at the same time so perfectly oily and greased ("to make a nice derangement of epitaphs") that they feel the less time spent in the convention hall the better. It is impossible to get them to assemble on time either at noon or at eight o'clock in the evening.

A well known radio commentator, dragged to the mike, remarked very briefly that the contrast in high spirits and enjoyment between this gathering and the one in Cleveland was very noticeable. He did not amplify his statement.

I suspect he might have said that at Cleveland the demonstrations were real and were animated by a fighting spirit, while here it is obvious that Mr. Farley's six-day circus program is dragging pretty badly.

In New York in 1924—which was a fighting convention—it is said that the delegates' money mostly gave out before they could get away. This year, one supposes, that no such contretemps will take place. In 1924 the party was poor. This year . . .

All conventions are rather farcical. This present one seems to have set an all-time high in that respect.

ANN MARSTERS IN HOLLYWOOD

Billie Burke Says Beauty Not Best Picture Asset

The Boston Evening American presents here with the 20th story of a series of intimate glimpses into the life of filmland's capital—"ANN MARSTERS IN HOLLYWOOD." Miss Marsters is being given entree to all of the studios, and is writing her scenes from behind the scenes in the land of make-believe. These stories will appear daily.

By ANN MARSTERS

Hollywood, Cal., June 26—A lovely lady in a pale beige chiffon gown with lace about her wrists and throat. Her eyes very blue. Her hair red-gold—the same shade of gold that it was 20 years ago when Florenz Ziegfeld fell in love with her.

Billie Burke, of course. On the Paramount set, she was making "The Count of Arizona," with Francis Lederer, directed by Harold Young. In it Miss Burke plays a rather spoiled, petulant, mercenary individual with whom you become very irritated.

Played in Pictures In Old Silent Days

Such a type is far, far away from her true personality—for, as Grizel used to say to Sentimental Tommy, "Think she is just sweet."

"And I discovered, as I talked with her, that there is a glint of humor behind her eyes that sparkles to the surface now and then.

"I seem always to be playing more or less unsympathetic roles," she said, smiling. "But I don't mind the least bit. I like to think that I'm a good trowper, by now, and it wouldn't occur to me to complain about whatever work is given me. I take it, and try to do it as well as possible."

Billie Burke will remind you that she became an actress in her very early youth, and that she has been playing in pictures since the last days of the silent films.

Need More Than Beauty in Films Now

Now she picked up a fluffy powder puff from her dressing table and touched it lightly to the tip of her nose. She smiled thoughtfully at me from out of the mirror when I questioned her about the Hollywood heroines of today.

"I think," she said, slowly, "that there has been a definite change in movie

BILLIE BURKE

More beauty is no longer a leading screen asset, Billie Burke, who has been with the films since the old silent days, tells Ann Marsters, Boston Evening American feature writer, on the Paramount set in Hollywood. The widow of Florenz Ziegfeld, Folies entrepreneur, believes a winning personality and pleasant voice are more desired by talkie-makers. Billie Burke never wanted to go on the stage, she confided to Ann, but she's a little charmed her daughter Patricia prefers journalism to the footlights.

types during recent years.

"Not so long ago, a girl needed only beauty to succeed in pictures—but now a great deal more is demanded by Hollywood and by the public.

"She must have education, for one thing. If you stop to think, many of the most promising new players are more on the college-girl type than the fluffy doll type."

Even our idea of beauty has changed a bit, Billie Burke believes.

Tried to Get Away From Artistic

"Quite plain girls can give the illusion of beauty," she said. "I think it is now more important that their faces be interesting rather than classically perfect."

"Of course, since talking pictures, there has been the added demand for nice speaking voices and good enunciation. Personality matters much more than it used to on the screen. Oh, yes—it is certain that bare beauty is not enough."

"Mr. Ziegfeld himself sensed that in the latter years of his life. He was reaching out for the natural, fresh type of girl with a background of culture and fine breeding. He was beginning to favor the 'small town' girl; trying to get away from the artificial and sophisticated."

"But always, one of the most important things to him, when selecting girls for his shows, was a perfect posture—the manner in which a girl carried herself."

"He liked the red hair and freckles type of girl,

Rainy Weekend Forecast Here

A rainy weekend forecast today as weather officials forecast rain tonight and probably tomorrow. The weather bureau reported rain along the New England coast from Boston up to New Brunswick, bringing a sudden end to the warm wave believed coming here from the northwest.

Temperature at 10 a. m. was 70 degrees, while the humidity was 65 per cent. The hottest June 26 on record was in 1923, the mercury at 92 degrees.

too," she said, her eyes twinkling a little, for she, herself, comes under that heading.

Billie Burke has a slight English accent; not an affected one, for she went to school in England. She was born, however, in Washington, D. C.

"I didn't want to become an actress," she said, "but somehow or other I got pushed onto the stage when I was in England."

When Billie Burke returned to America, you all know that she became one of the greatest stars of Broadway. Her biggest stage hit was in the title role of "Becky Sharp."

Her first appearance on the screen was in a silent film. She did only one—and left Hollywood. Then she came back to play in "A Bill of Divorcement." And here she has been ever since.

One of her dearest friends was Will Rogers, whom she met when he was a star in the "Follies." You may remember that she played a role in one of Rogers' last pictures, "Doubting Thomas."

"When I was very young," said Billie Burke,

ANN MARSTERS

"I had an intense ambition to become a writer. Now my daughter seems to have inherited that desire."

Little Disappointed in Her Daughter

Patricia Ziegfeld is still in her teens, and she's making her way in newspaper work. She has been writing for the Beverly Hills Citizen, which is owned by Will Rogers, Jr.

"I suppose it's inconsistent of me," said Miss Burke, "but I'm a little disappointed that Patricia didn't inherit some of her father's genius for the stage. She insists that she would rather write than have anything to do with the theater or with pictures."

Perhaps Patricia's mother would still rather be a writer herself than an actress—for she remarked that she would love to write a play some day, either for the stage or screen.

But that's just what Patricia is planning to do.

Tomorrow, Ann Marsters interviews George Roff, screen's versatile leading man.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By Ann Marsters

Hollywood, Cal., June 26—There is a man here in Hollywood who could tell you a lot of real truth about the Glamour Girls, if you should ask him.

He is Orry Kelly, stylist for Warner Brothers, and one of the really great designers of the land.

He admits that if anyone ought to know the sort of people these famous actresses actually are, it's their dress designer.

"I've seen them at their best and at their worst. I've seen them perfectly dressed, poised, and charming, on the set and in society."

"I've seen them standing for long hours, tired and harassed, while the fitter fussed and pinned, turned them this way and that until the poor stars were on the verge of screaming."

But they never scream, said Orry Kelly. Not, anyway, the best of the stars.

"I have discovered," he told me, "that the nearer one gets toward the top, the easier people are to deal with."

"The bigger the star, the less difficult she is to please. That's because the truly great ones are more able to have the same thought two days running. They are less inclined to twist and change from the original sketch of a gown. They have definite ideas and are by far the easiest to create for."

Likes to Omit Frills From Gowns

As for his own ideas—he likes to omit em-broidered, beaded, frills, and such fussiness whenever possible, relying instead on line and contour for effects. He keeps the practical in mind, realizing that many women like to copy the gowns of their favorite star.

"I believe," he said, "that women look to motion pictures for fashion ideas more than they do to Paris or the fashion books. So I advise them to concentrate on line."

Greta Garbo has a new car. That's quite an item when you consider that she's been driving the same old battered and faded black sedan for the past ten years.

The other day she showed up at the Metro Guild in a shiny new limousine driven by a jived chauffeur, and whizzed by the gatekeeper who tried to stop her. He wanted to know who she was and if she had a right to be there.

A young man from Massachusetts mailed a new alarm clock to Joan Blondell.

"Please write your name across the face of it and return it," he wrote. "Then it won't be so hard to wake up in the morning."

Joan did as he asked.

Planned Tattoo Over Autograph

Speaking of autographs, Kay Francis was confronted by a young naval officer who handed her a pencil and asked her to write her name on his forearm.

When she had done so, he said: "I shall have it tattooed immediately."

Eddie Cantor received a very cheering newspaper clipping through the mail. It was a scientific announcement stating that when daughters predominate in a family it indicates that the husband is of the robust, dominant, masculine type. (Cantor has five daughters and no sons.)

Someone also mailed this to Joe E. Brown and Bing Crosby, each of whom has three sons.

Holy Land Exhibit Ready For Viewing Next Tuesday

LIFE OF JESUS TOLD IN ART

It's just a matter of five days now before Greater Bostonians will have their opportunity to view that much-heralded Holy Land Exhibit.

The foundations have been met. Most of the miniature reproductions of Palestine's terrain have been placed—the mountains, rivers, cities, farm-lands and gardens.

Now the brothers Gaul, who spent eleven years creating the mechanical marvel, are working on the intricate electrical and mechanical arrangements that animate the 140 figures taking part in this reproduction of the life of Jesus.

Ready Tuesday

Tuesday morning, at 11 o'clock, the exhibition will be ready at Horticultural Hall, where it will remain for a limited engagement.

Already this Holy Land showing has received the endorsement of scores of clergymen of all creeds from all over the New England states between Massachusetts and Maine.

The exhibit is set up in the center of Horticultural Hall, where it will remain for a limited engagement. It is a masterpiece of art and science, and is a reproduction of the life of Jesus. It is a masterpiece of art and science, and is a reproduction of the life of Jesus.

The Holy Land exhibit is sponsored by the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser, and a share of its proceeds will be donated to the Christmas Basket Fund of the two newspapers.

The Swamp Monster

Fear-Blinded Woman Fights Wild Beast and Saves Mother

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

Well, sir, if I seem to be continually harping on the fact that adventures are things you meet up with most frequently at home, you can put it down to the fact that I am continually being reminded of it. Just the other day, while looking through a sheet of letters I came to a story by a woman who had an adventure on a farm. Well-of course, there's nothing unusual in that.

The funny part of it was that the farm was in this country, and the adventure was of a sort you'd only expect to run into in the jungles of Africa or South America, or to read about in some account of the grim battles between men and animals that the ancient Romans used to stage in their gladiatorial arenas.

The woman is Lottie Hawco—Mrs. John Hawco, of New York City. And the animal she fought with was a wild boar. I'll bet a lot of people—including me—didn't know there were wild boars in this country. But there are, as any South Carolina farmer can tell you.

Those boars were tame and fat and domesticated until, over the space of six or eight hundred years they became the fat, lazy, gluttonous animals you see in hog pens the country over.

But a pig will stay fat and tame, and lazy only so long as he's kept in captivity and started with chop suey from that well-known galvanized iron can out on the back porch. Once he gets loose and goes back to the woods again and has to make for his own food—well—then he gets thin and tough and rancid. His tusks grow out, and in a generation or two he becomes a boar again—just as wild and as dangerous an animal as ever he was when he roamed the marshes and forests of old England in the days of Robin Hood.

There are a lot of these things in this country, and a lot of country of which the public has no idea. In the back country of South Carolina, for instance, there are a lot of wild turkeys and round them up, because they are the source of the wild turkeys in the neighborhood. And there are a lot of wild turkeys, and on February 15, 1936, a woman named Lottie Hawco, who, on February 15, 1936, was with her mother and her sister, was on a farm near Charleston, S.C., where a wild boar had been in progress.

A bunch of men from the neighborhood had been out all day, combing the marshes with packs of dogs, cutting hogs and herding them—a live-in-a-high-south farm in a swamp. They had returned home with a few seven hogs, but when a fellow was high to a man and weighing three or four hundred pounds, and male that could break a man's leg with their huge, crushing jaws and which frequently did, and which the flocks that hunted them with one exception, one of the long, protruding tusks. The men backed the wagon up to a strong inclosure and were unloading the hogs one by one and cautiously probing them into the pen. Lottie's mother and sister were standing near her, watching the proceedings and then suddenly a terrible thing happened.

The men had unloaded the largest boar and were prodding it toward the pen, when it turned, squealed between the wagon and the inclosure, and rushed out into the open, reaching the great beach and fuming at the turn. It headed straight for Lottie's mother, who was standing nearest the pen, and before she could turn to run, it was on her, flinging her in a heap to the ground, biting at her savagely.

It was the most terrible thing I ever ever beheld in my life. Charlie, the foreman, stood with his mouth open, too surprised for a moment to even move. A few men, paralyzed with fright, clapped their hands over their eyes and began to scream. Lottie herself was numb with terror and for a few seconds—seconds—seconds—she seemed like a lifeless, cold statue, not in the spot. All the rest of the men were on the other side of the pen, or on the wagon too far away to reach the spot at any to do any good.

Then, all of a sudden, Lottie came to life. She could explain what happened, but it seemed as if a spring inside her had suddenly been released. She sprang forward, threw herself on the snarling, screaming, fuming, jumping, and mauling beast, and, slighted out the boar and began beating and mauling and scratching it with her hands.

The boar could not stand Lottie with one thrust of its sharp, pointed tusks. Lottie's mother had been saved from death that day only by her long arms and things chewing. But taken by surprise, the boar could not get its tusks out, and the wild new monster came beating and kicking at the flanks—tearing and scratching at his eyes. It was a thing of fury.

This one did just that. Snarling and grunting, he turned to flee from this incredible new attack. He got about three steps, and then he found himself tangled in the ropes of the men who by this time had come around from the other side of the pen to deal with him.

The first thing Lottie knew, she was back on the porch of the farmhouse with her mother, looking over herself for injuries. She doesn't even remember helping her mother to the porch, and to this day she can't figure out how she came out of that fight without a scratch on her body.

Tomorrow I'll get another thrilling adventure story for you. Don't miss it!

HANEY ON ECONOMICS

DOLLAR BACKED BY 40 CENTS SILVER

LABELLED UNSOUND

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University)

New York, June 26.—Senator Joe Robinson, uncomfortable but politically faithful, has undertaken in a speech before the New Deal convention to defend the acts of Mr. Roosevelt and his "brain trust."

He even went so far as to allege that "the Roosevelt administration has faithfully complied with the spirit of the Chicago platform promises!"

The unfortunate senator, however, recognizes his difficulty by admitting that there may have been a "partial departure as to the letter" of those promises. This is like a naughty child who, having fallen in and got wet, tells his irate father, "I thought you meant I wasn't to go wading in the pond, so I just went in the river."

Honestly, when a man promises to balance his budget, what is the difference between the letter and the spirit? When a man promises economy, does the spirit mean economy and the letter mean waste?

The senator, as usual with a man who has a weak case, then tries to attack his opponent. He criticizes what he calls London's bolt from the Republican platform. The facts are these: The Republicans merely said "sound money." Governor Landon wants no doubt as to what this means, so he specified money "convertible into gold." He did this before he was nominated. Thus, in nominating him, the Republicans accepted his definition. That is no bolt.

Senator Robinson went on to assert that anyhow U. S. currency is the soundest in the world. (This assertion is designed to meet our indignation over the breaking of the Roosevelt sound money pledge.)

What are the facts? Until a few weeks ago, the French franc was the soundest currency in the world. This is obvious from the fact that it was the basis for determining the values of other currencies.

Then came the French New Deal! Socialist and Communist leaders gained control, and the franc fell. The French rushed to get rid of francs. Why? Because the French New Deal government did exactly what our New Deal government has done. The French franc is now much like the American dollar as to soundness.

You can't have sound money said at the same time have a socialistic government with an unbalanced budget. And where did the French turn as they fled from their un-sound francs? They began to hoard pounds, not dollars! Doesn't that show where the soundest currency lies?

Finally, I ask you in the name of common sense, how a dollar backed by only 40 cents worth of silver can be sound. The senator may mean that there are no sound currencies left in the world. If so, the dollar may be as sound as the others, but it is not as sound as the dollar.

Sensor Barkley said we "shall" (not will) balance the budget. Now Senator Robinson says we "contemplate" balancing the budget! But what we want is to have the budget balanced.

Evidently the Roosevelt strategy is to convey the idea that a balanced budget would bring "hunger and cold" to the citizens. This is sheer buncombe.

We do not need Passamaquoddy, or Florida pipe canals, or Works Progress Administration bonapartism. What we need is normal business recovery and productive employment. And these can come only when the Washington bureaucrats quit their money tinkering, waste, and punitive taxes, so that investment and business enterprise can proceed.

I venture to predict that as long as Governor Landon's victory rise, we will see expansion in the basic heavy industries, and with that gains in productive employment which will prove that the cure for "hunger and cold" lies in sound money and industrial recovery.

The big issue between the New Dealers and the rest of us is just this: Do we want bureaucratic control of business from Washington, or do we want local self-government and private enterprise in business?

ACTIVE Wool Goods

DEMANDS NOTE

MILLS HOLD PRICES FIRM

New York, June 26.—Demand for wool goods was moderately active, and prices remained strong throughout primary piece goods markets last week, according to the New York Wool Top Exchange Service.

Buyers were unable to obtain the prices quoted a while back on special lots of goods, and mills, faced with steady and rising values, were disposed to grant concession even where large orders were proffered.

Merchandise activity showed some increase over that reported for April and May, as mills started up more orders, and the production of women's wear continued to expand.

Unfilled orders are estimated at slightly below 40,000,000 yards, says the Exchange Service. Men's wear orders estimated at 20,000,000 yards, women's wear at 10,000,000 yards.

Most of the current business is in the small hulk type. Buyers who are currently running at about a million and a half yards a week.

Sales of men's wear suitings are slow, due to the fact that suits are approaching the end of the fall season. The new spring and summer lines of men's wear materials will be opened early next month.

Most of the current business in wool goods is limited to orders of the small hulk type. Buyers who are compelled to operate early are reported to have had down reserves for fairly large orders in the spring months in advance of the season.

The bonus has failed thus far to stimulate activity in the wool goods market to any extent. What buying was done was confined to regular suitings, and the bulk of the retail business is being done in sport suits, swim suits, straw trousers and golf apparel.

Demand for women's garments for fall is increasing steadily, but the imposition of a tax of 3 per cent by the government is causing some concern. White and pastel suits are in good volume, along with travel wear.

Demand for suitings continues to hold up well. Knitwear booked a fair amount of business last week on both sports and street wear. Sweaters, makers of swim suits, and sport suits are in good volume, along with travel wear.

FOREIGN Capital in U. S. UP

IN AID STOCK MARKET RISE

It is quite significant, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute, that the amount of foreign capital in the United States increased by $1,365,000,000 in 1935. Foreign long-term investments increased by $765,000,000 while there was an inflow of $600,000,000.

This movement of foreign capital to the United States, together with some repatriation of American short-term funds in 1935, amounted to $1,735,000,000.

Obviously, if the drain of gold to this country continues for long at the same rate as last year and the year before, the monetary gold stocks of the rest of the world would become so depleted as to be inadequate as a basis for currency and credit.

Already many countries have altered their currency systems at the gold standard in anything like the same form as in the past will be very difficult, if it is possible at all.

These large gold imports, moreover, have had an unsteady influence on the financial situation in the United States. China, because of the huge inflow of the yellow metal, the reserve balances of the United States at the end of 1935 were approximately $2,000,000,000.

Since, for the country as a whole, the $10 of bank credit can be used in $1 of currency reserves, the raising of these reserves constitutes a potential new bank credit. Credit expansion of even a fraction of this amount would create an inflationary boom with ultimate disastrous effects for the entire country.

Of late, the board of governors of the Federal Reserve system has greatly increased powers of credit control, and under the banking act of 1935, may raise member bank reserve requirements by as much as 100 per cent, which would practically offset the effect on credit expansion.
